

TO WHOM IT CONCERNS:

I WENT INTO THE BOOKING AREA TO CLEAN
BREATHALYZER AND INTOX CELL BECAUSE I THOUGHT
IT WAS EMPTY AND IT WAS UNLOCKED. I WAS SURPRISED TO SEE REAL SMALL SNEAKERS OUTSIDE OF INTOX AND A WOMAN
IN IT. SHE WAS JUST LAYING DOWN. I ALWAYS CHECK ON THE SUPPLY OF TOILET PAPER AND PAPER TOWELS ON FRIDAY.

About 9:30 AM, on Friday, May 3rd, 1996, Christy Miller came on station with her husband, Rusty Miller. She was crying and her husband gave Officer Dave Cimperman, Christy's medication for her kidney. Officer Cimperman had Christy come through the blue door and read her her rights and explained to her why she was under arrest. Officer Cimperman had Christy pull up her shirt to the bottom of her breasts to see if she was concealing any contraband. He then led her through the Vestibule and placed her in the Intox Cell. He also had Christy take her shoes off and remove her shoe laces before entering the cell. At about 10:20 AM a group of children came on station for a tour, Officer Cimperman took them on a tour while Chief Stagers sat desk. Two men then came on station for fingerprints to be taken, the Chief did their fingerprints. Then a buzzer rang from one of the inmates needed something and the Chief asked what "he" wanted. That is when I told the Chief that the prisoner was a female and not a male. (Chief) He said; "what, are you sure?" and I said yes, her name is Christy Miller.

and she is in the Intox Cell, I also pointed to her shoes which were sitting on the floor outside the cell. That is when the chief asked me to find Cimperman right away. I found him downstairs finishing the tour and told him the Chief needs to see him right away.

While Christy was in the Intox cell the maintenance man, Harry Tate went in the jail area to clean then he came to the door that connects the jail area and dispatch room. Officer Cimperman opened the door for Harry and Harry asked him what was back there. Officer Cimperman said; "What do you mean?" and Harry said; "Well, I went back there to clean and saw little shoes on the floor and looked in the Intox Cell and saw a woman." He also mentioned to Officer Cimperman that the cell door was not locked and Officer Cimperman said it was OK because she wasn't going anywhere.
